You'll need an instrument before you begin your guitar learning journey! While much of your decision will be based on personal preference, there are some important factors to consider when buying a guitar as a novice guitarist: Price Style Player Age/Size Guitar Status Where you're a novice, it's best to avoid buying garden sales unless you're shopping with someone with a pawn shop, flea market, or experience buying a guitar. Never buy a guitar, you may not know what to look for in terms of damage or guitar quality. This is said, a local music retail shop is the best bet. Also, be sure to review the business's return policy, you can also shop online with a reputable company. While some recommend that a large guitar can cost between $300 and $500, there are plenty of quality guitars available in the range of $100 to $200. Also, there are many package options that include not only guitar, but although it can also be based on this decision preference, such as basic accessories, a tuner and concert bag, we think the best guitar for a novice is acoustic guitar. Classical guitars have a wider neck that can be difficult to process when learning guitar chords for younger students or physically smaller individuals. Meanwhile, the electric guitar is designed to be played with an amplifier, which comes at an additional cost. Acoustic guitar is simple and requires little of any additional equipment, making them ideal for novice guitarists. There are a lot of things to look at when buying a guitar. If you are buying a brand new guitar, these problems will most likely not be a concern, but it is worth checking out for them. Here are some steps to follow when checking a guitar status: 1.) Run your hand slowly down and down guitar neck length, below As it is. It should be smooth, no edges or splint. 2.) Turn the guitar over and check its heels as indicated in the photo below. The guitar should not have cracks or gaps between the heel and neck. 3.) In front of the guitar, as in the picture below, check the bridge. Run a subtle selection between the bridge and the guitar body to make sure there are no gaps. 4.) Check the guitar's spring matte by pressing the first, second and third act. You should be able to do this with the least effort. Come to act 12 and press. The distance from the top of the curtain to the bottom of the string should be no more than three times. If it is five times, the guitar can be a crooked neck or a bridge too high. To play your favorite song, you need to learn guitar chords.
